

Art in Motion (AIM) - Artist Profiles

Betty Sargent

Betty keeps her camera with her all the time and photographs what she sees. Photography gives Betty a chance to show how the city changes, in case it is forgotten. Her new series of photographs is of shadows in puddles and of her own reflection. Recently, Betty has been taking photographs using mirrors to see what is behind her. Betty fills in parts of her photographs with coloured paper and coloured cotton to create something new.

Chris Rose

Chris is a visual artist who paints in a cartoon style using bright, vivid colours. He focuses on painting portraits of his friends to remember happy times. Chris is also a creative writer and writes fantastical short stories, which mix his playful sense of humour with details of everyday life.

Jeff Johns

Jeff views himself as a creative outsider. His work is introspective as he tries to work out how he feels and deal with difficulties. His work is predominantly text and performance based. Jeff is a performance poet and draw images with words. For him, his work is a cathartic process and it can be emotional, angry and passionate.

Jonathan Barr Lindsay

Jonathan is a visual artist and writer and is interested in history and how people used to live. He collects old photographs and uses these to inspire his work. Jonathan particularly likes to explore the details of old buildings and statues. In his recent work, he imagines himself as historical figures and paints statues of himself.

Dave Pearce

Dave is a poet whose work is inspired by nature and local history. He performs his work for audiences across Bristol.
